BOARD HAS SET ELECTION DATE ON AMENDMENTS

Former Assemblyman Makes Futile Demand That Vote Be Held May 28

Over the protest of former Assemblyman Frederick Peterson and other sponsors of the San Mateo County charter amendment move, the Board of Supervisors, Wednesday of this week, set the amendment election for Tuesday, June 22.

This date falls five days short of expiration of the 60 day period in which the board must call the election.

The principal point of the proposed amendment is to change the office of county executive from an appointive to an elective status.

'SWING PARADE' TAKES ON TONE OF OPERA NIGHT

High Class Crowd Attends Regularly Each Performance at Alcazar Theater

Last to fall in line in recognition of the merit of the stage productions of the Federal Theater Projects but now among its most ardent adherents are the ultra ultra of the town, old Nob Hill itself, in person or rather, persons. For "Swing Parade," the current musical revue at the Alcazar sponsored by the Federal Theaters, the elite have swung into line. It has been a bloodless revolution with both sides victorious, as paradoxical as that may sound.

Time was, when the Project first opened up in San Francisco, the actor personnel was considered in the light of a group of striving amateurs, though there was not an actor in the entire group of three hundred who had not had more than enough experience on the stage for an average lifetime.

The first of the town to see in Federal Theaters plays something to come again for were, strangely enough, the church people. "First

DERBY WEEK TO SEE CHAMPION CROWNED ANEW

Crack Band Of Three Year Olds Reading For Stakes Running Tomorrow

Derby week is here and the three year old champion of the West will be crowned at Bay Meadows today, Saturday, following the running of the $5,000 California Derby, while at the same time the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs will produce its annual star of the turf.

A crack band of youngsters is being pointed for the western derby and the race promises to be one of the best of the season. F. A. Carreaud has a formidable pair of contenders in Parmenarch, the German bred colt of which great things are expected, and Bakerstown, a high priced animal which has been training exceptionally well for this race.

Norman W. Church has four eligibles for the derby. They are Patty Cake, Sir Oracle, Fair Lead and Danke Schon, all of which have proved their class.

Regarded as one of the best fillies produced on the west coast in recent years is William LeBaron's Brown Jade, which will receive much support in the big race.

Others regarded as strong contenders for the derby at Bay Meadows are Earl Beezley's Rockwood and Rebuttal, Rosedale Stable's Exclaim, Jobella Stable's Papenie, I. D. Parker's Wrackfield, Double H. Ranch's Farquhar, Milo Shields' Half Time and Oakland Stable's Wise Alibi.

Zeppelin Hindenburg Explodes Over Lakehurst, N. J.

This remarkable photograph shows the huge German Zeppelin Hindenburg as it exploded with a terrific roar over the U. S. Navy base at Lakehurst, N. J., late Thursday. It immediately burst into flames and crumpled to the ground. First reports emanating out of the confusion read all 92 persons aboard the airship were killed, but later more accurate figures were given. Thirty-four bodies had been recovered from the wreckage while some 22 persons were believed to have jumped from the flaming dirigible. About 20 of these have been accounted for, many of them seriously injured.

BAYSHORE CITY PLANS TO HOLD OWN CELEBRATION DURING WEEK OF GOLDEN GATE BRIDGE FIESTA

Board Of Councilmen Vote $200 To Defray First Program Expenses

Several items of wide community interest came before the Bayshore council in a regular session held Tuesday evening of this week.

The council considered a recommendation of the Bayshore Improvement and Social Club that Bayshore combine with Visitacion Valley for the celebration of the Golden Gate Bridge Fiesta, May 27 to June 2. Mayor J. P. Lawson whole heartedly advocated Bayshore participation in the celebration, but recommended that Bayshore stage its own individual fiesta. Councilmen Parker, Herman, Smith and Malone unanimously supported the decision to "put the affair on ourselves in our own district and with our own people."

A motion was passed to call a meeting of representatives of all local organizations for the following evening to discuss and outline plans for the Bayshore fiesta. A sum of $200 was allocated to defray initial celebration expenses.

Brisbane Pays Tribute To Annis

All Brisbane pays a last tribute of respect to the community founder and builder—Arthur Annis.

From barren fields and hills—Arthur Annis, with untiring energy, moulded Brisbane—and may the town forever stand as a monument in glorification of his name.

Arthur Annis was a friend to everybody. He was, moreover, the idol of the children of Brisbane. In his roll of generosity as Santa Claus, no child was left without a toy or gift on Christmas eve.

Respected and loved by those of the community, the death of Arthur Annis will leave an emptiness in the hearts of all he contacted in his daily routine of work.

In Arthur Annis' devotion to his family, to his neighbors and to his community it would be hard to find a parallel.

TEACHERS ARE HELPED BY NEW SECURITY BILL

Probationary Period Is Extended Another Two Years By Law

Large groups of school teachers throughout California, especially in interior and rural communities, were assured security in their positions for the coming two years with the announcement of the signing by Governor Merriam of the Sawallisch bill, extending the probationary period of teachers in unified school districts for two years.

Under the "unification" law, effective in 1936, and providing for the consolidation of school districts, teachers reemployed this spring for the coming school year would automatically have been granted permanent tenure.

By the terms of the Sawallish bill, which amends the present law, teachers in unified districts may be compelled to serve a full three year probationary period, or an additional two years for teachers who have served for the past year.

Under the Sawallisch amendment, however, trustees retain the right, at their option, of granting permanent status, or tenure, to such teachers as have in their judgment merited

Prominent Realtor Passes Sunday

Arthur Annis, prominent Brisbane real estate agent, passed away, early Sunday morning of this week, after suffering a recent attack of appendicitis.

Funeral services were held from a San Francisco funeral parlor and interment was at Home of Peace Cemetery. Arthur Annis is survived by his wife, Mrs. Arthur Annis; son, Harold, and daughters, Gladys and Joy.

The old West was reborn in Southern California, Wednesday of this week, when the city of San Diego celebrated its annual fiesta, Cinco deMayo, in memory of a glorious army victory many years ago.

Dance exhibitions and other events were put on by Fremont and San Diego High School students. Many old costumes were in evidence.

Duke of Windsor

Edward, Duke of Windsor, is pictured as he left a train at Verneuil L'Etang, France, while en route to Monts, where he met Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, who has lived in seclusion for the last five months. They had not seen each other since Edward abdicated the English throne. Edward gave up his throne in order to marry the American woman, the ceremony being tentatively scheduled for the post-coronation days.

Boys Exhibit Swimming And Life Saving Tactics At Exposition

Brisbane Boy Scouts cracked into the headlines late last month and received recognition throughout the bay area for their excellent exhibitions on swimming and life saving displayed at the annual Scouting Merit Badge Exposition held at the San Francisco Civic Auditorium.

More than 125 troops of the San Francisco Area Council participated in the show. Because of the particular ability of Brisbane Scouts and the thoroughness with which they prepared their exhibitions the boys were awarded second place of the first division in the class "A" ranks.

MOUNTAIN PLAY YEARLY EVENT SUNDAY, MAY 23

Bay District Folks to Portray English Seafarers Of Eighteenth Century

"No hair cuts, until after the Mountain Play," is the edict for the men, who will take part in "Thunder in Paradise," a pageant of Hawaii, to be staged on Tamalpais, on Sunday, May 23.

The players who are cast for native fishermen, warriors, and even those who play the parts of English seafarers of the eighteenth century, will be more effective in their parts without a modern hair cut, according to the director, Reginald Travers.

Authentic period costumes for the piece are being designed by Leslie Crandall. Fred Lono Benrath is acting as technical advisor, in the selection of primitive music and dances.

Twenty male dancers and a number of pretty dark eyed girls are rehearsing the ceremonial dances of the Islands, under the direction of Betty Horst.

Members of the hiking clubs of the bay district, who will take part in the ensemble pageant, are rehearsing under the direction of Dick Musselman, assistant to Travers.

Many of the actors are those who have volunteered for parts each season, for many years. Perhaps holding the record for long time loyalty to the Mountain Play, is Jonathan A. Webb, of Berkeley, who for some twenty years has volunteered as a member of the ensemble. Allan Atkinson, who will lead the tom tom beaters in "Thunder in Paradise," has appeared in the cast for nine consecutive seasons.

FEDERAL MUSIC WILL BE HEARD AT HI TONIGHT

'Ad Astra,' Symphonic Poem, Written By Local Composer Will Be Played

In observance of National Music Week the combined San Mateo and San Jose Federal Symphony Orchestras will present a concert at the Jefferson Union High School Auditorium this evening, Friday, at 8:15 o'clock. The public is invited to attend, free, this excellent orchestral presentation given under auspices of the Works Progress Administration, Federal Music Project, Dr. Nikolai, Sokoloff, director. Parent Teacher groups are urged to attend.

The orchestra, which is one of the best maintained by the federal government, is composed of many outstanding musicians. Their work compares favorably with the concerts of the leading symphony orchestras of the nation. Arthur Gundersen, music supervisor of San Mateo County, will direct this evening. He will be assisted by Edgar Vinal, Daly City conductor and composer.

FEATURES

Two features of unusual interest to both musicians and laymen will be the presentation of "Ad Astra," a symphonic poem, composed and directed by Edgar Vinal, and the playing of two original cello solos by the famous American composer, Frederick P. Search.

Mr. Search, who now lives in San Francisco, where he is supervisor of orchestration and of the concert

THREE HUNDRED MILLION STATE FUNDS RECEIVED

Federal Moneys Expended For Roads, Public Buildings and Housing

California received a total of $357,832,942.62 from the federal government during the two year period from April 8, 1935 to March 31, 1937, according to a report received by Donald Renshaw, State Director for the National Emergency Council.

This information is based upon the report showing the financial status of funds provided in the Emergency Relief Appropriation Acts of 1935 and 1936 as of March 31, 1937. Expenditures incurred in prosecuting the Works Program totaled $322,941,497.18, leaving unexpended balances of $34,891,445.44.

The report shows further that $33,012,027.54 has been expended for highways, roads, streets, etc.; $29,268,325.27 for public buildings; $28,022.66 for housing projects; $22,594,796.50 for recreational facilities; $65,700,011.62 for conservation work; $17,105,854.97 for electric, water and sewage systems; $11,112,507.21 for transportation facilities; $34,666,145.07 for educational projects; $9,332,948.59 for administrative expenses; $4,143,059.87 for Rural Resettlement and direct relief; $66,410,451.00 in grants to the State for relief and $29,567,346.88 for miscellaneous projects.

Fire Department To Sponsor Dance

The Bayshore Fire Department will sponsor its first annual dance on Saturday evening, May 15, in the Voters League Hall on Acacia street.

The committee, headed by Arley King, reports that the affair is expected to be one of the most outstanding ever held by the department. Music will be furnished by Mel Lyons from 9 p. m. till 1 a. m.

Bob Feller Is Shy; Publicity Has Not Swelled His Head

THEY said the kid was upstairs in his room but that it would be a good idea to hurry for it was about time for he and Weatherly to start out for the night. They seemed to say that the young man was a bit of a heller—and at a tender age of eighteen—but it seems he is nothing of the sort.

"Yeah, we're startin' out—Stormy and me," said Bob Feller. "But come in. Yeah, we were goin' to the movies. Go every night—we're bugs about the movies. Me—I like Westerns, specially Hopalong Cassidy. Stormy does, too."

The two young Indians sat down. Weatherly is small and pudgy and twenty-two, but looks even younger than Feller. They have been roommates ever since Feller joined the club. Feller's father stipulated that his boy must be roomed with a young man of good character before he'd sign any papers. Every one agreed that Weatherly was the answer.

"We get along great," said Stormy. "Like the same things, like to go to bed early. We're gonna have a small apartment in Cleveland this summer."

Feller was sitting silently. He is a shy youngster, terribly afraid that people will think all this publicity has gone to his head. Everything he does is studied, on or off the field.

His dad visited him at New Orleans and some one asked if Pop would spend much time in Cleveland this summer.

"No, Dad doesn't like big cities," he said. "If I have a good year, though, he'll probably do a lot of visiting. But if I have a bad one I'll probably do a lot of visiting myself—to Van Meter.

He pitches three-quarter fashion now, but doesn't wholly approve of the plan.

Bob Feller

"I'd like to be a pitcher like Walter Johnson," he said. "He pitched sidearm, didn't he? And he lasted a long time didn't he? Well, I think I should pitch sidearm, too. That's the way I threw back on the sandlots and I did all right there. It's my natural way of throwing.

"How many do I think I'll win? I just wouldn't say, couldn't say. I'll be satisfied if my average is as good as it was last year."

Last year in his short time with the club he won five games, lost three. If he averages a victory a week he'll come up with twenty-three decisions.

Business Manager Slapnick's recent statement that Feller would pitch once a week doesn't meet with his heartiest approval.

"Why, back home I used to pitch three times a week," he says, "and it never bothered me."

Never Tries Bean Ball but Batters Beware!

Some one suggested that perhaps the American league was a little different than the sandlots of Iowa.

"Well, not to me, it's not," he replied. "All I do is rear back and let it go, whether it's in a sandlot game or up here."

Some one else wondered if, when he improved his control, the batters wouldn't gain more confidence.

"I just won't improve that much," he said. "I never tried to hit a batter in my life, but, after all, getting out of the way of a ball is their business, not mine."

"What about Hubbell, what do you think of him?"

"I guess he's the greatest pitcher I've ever seen," he said. "He must be the best. I know I never saw a ball do the things he can make it do."

Then some one asked him if he had a girl back home and the meeting sort of broke up.

"Well sort of," he said. "But we'll discuss that later."

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:

THE Yankees figure Detroit is the team to beat this year. They insist Cleveland is over-rated and that Bob Feller can be beaten by a combination of waiting him out and bunting. The best National league club, they say, is the Cubs . . . Players, by the way, gossip that times have not changed in Cleveland. When Walter Johnson was manager Billy Evans tried to run the team. Now Cy Slapnicka, who succeeded Evans as business manager, is trying to do all the thinking for Manager Steve O'Neill . . . 95 per cent of the horsemen racing in Florida last winter voted against that Australian starting gate with which New York's turf overlords opened the season at the Jamaica racetrack . . . Nasty mens insist that all is not sweetness and light among Cornell's football folks. They insist that Graduate Manager Jim Lynch recently called in Coach Carl Snavely to chide him about proselyting activities and that Carl has been doing a bit of lip-biting since. However, chide or no chide, they also insist that poor but honest boys still are getting a looksee from Cornell and that the Pittsfield, Mass., district was well gandered at two weeks ago . . . John Meketi, Giant rookie pitcher now with Jersey City, is one of the best harmonica players in baseball . . . Marty Glickman, the Olympic sprinter, is shunning sports for a short time due to complications caused by low blood pressure . . . Add look alikes—Julius Solters of the Indians and Joe Medwick of the Cards.

Although Temple loses 14 lettermen by graduation Pop Warner wears a bigger smile at spring football practice than he did 12 months ago . . . Rivington Bisland, the eminent sports box-office man, used to pitch for Louisville . . . One of the sights at the St. Nicks boxing arena is Jafsie Condon jumping up from his ringside seat and cheering whenever his bodyguard, Al Reich, referees . . . Dave Soden, Brooklyn tax appraiser and ardent sports fan, is being talked about as the next president of his borough . . . The National league may add Andy Kolk, an umpire let out by the International, to its staff this summer. Pretty good man, too. Because so many customers think he was robbed during the Montanez fight Lightweight Champion Lou Ambers, who previously never had been much of a drawing card, now should be one of the best gate attractions.

Pop Warner

Vinnie Richards again has been invited to coach the Australian Davis cup team in preparation for the Aussie's North American zone finals with the United States at Forest Hills May 29-31. His acceptance depends upon whether or not he goes abroad. He offered his services to the Americans but was ignored in favor of George Lott and Karl Kozeluh even though Davis Cup Committee Chairman Walter Pate credited the Australians' victory last year to Vinnie's tutoring . . . Bill Tilden must really be cracking up at last. The other day he remarked that he was tempted to pile all his racquets in the center of the court and make a bonfire of them.

Dick Gill, Boston college's gashouse blond, is due for plenty of shoving around on the intercollegiate tracks this spring. Eddie O'Brien and Jim Herbert are reported as still being exceedingly sore over the way he elbowed and jostled the slender Charlie Beetham in a recent meet . . . Although he is best celebrated as a football center, Ivy league pitchers are worried about the hitting prowess of Dartmouth's Mutt Ray . . . Jake Flowers, who might have been a great infielder if he had not been troubled by ill health during his Dodger and Cardinal days, now has entirely recovered. He weighs 182 pounds and is seeking either to manage a Class B team or play in the International league . . . Mrs. Payne Whitney, the Greentree lady, must be America's ace turf fan. Her friends claim she reads every single line about racing in every paper and magazine published in this country.

If Ken Sandbach, the Princeton quarterback, does turn pro he is more likely to go with Brooklyn than with the Giants. That is because he should get more chance to play with the Dodgers, who need a good quarterback and passer, while the Giants are somewhat averse to shoving first-year pro performers into their regular lineup. Both clubs are bidding for him, though, and it also is gossiped that alumni are making attractive business offers to keep him away from the pay-for-play sport . . . Col. Matt Winn, the Kentucky Derby impresario, has ten grandchildren. Two of the boys are under sixteen years of age and have viewed eleven Derbies. The colonel, incidentally, first viewed the Louisville show in 1875 from atop his father's grocery wagon.

In spite of the pressure being put upon them, the New York boxing commissioners are unlikely to okay a Ross-Montanez bout. Aside from a few little trifles such as contracts signed for other bouts the commissioners figure that Ross, a welterweight, and Montanez, a lightweight, have sufficient opportunities for diversion in their own classes.

Coking of Coal Is Greatly Improved by New Method

Better and Cheaper Product Promised

Pittsburgh, Pa. — Cheaper, better and more versatile coking of coal is in prospect as the result of five years of fundamental research at the Coal Research Laboratory of the Carnegie Institute of Technology here.

By breaking with traditional methods of turning bituminous coal into coke, gas, tar and chemicals, William B. Warren explained here recently to some leading industrialists, it should be possible for coke oven operators to decrease cost, cut operating time by a third, while improving quality and yield of coke.

Mr. Warren recommended that coal be preconditioned before coking by warming it to 200-400 degrees Centigrade (400-750 degrees Fahrenheit). This precarbonization treatment could be carried out in low temperature apparatus that is much less expensive than the coke ovens themselves.

Mr. Warren's Theory.

Delving into just what happens when coal is heated and carbonized, Mr. Warren evolved a theory. This theory, applied to practical operation of coke ovens, promises the large economies.

First, when coal is heated the large molecules break apart into much smaller units. At slightly higher temperatures, surface changes take place within the coal that cause the little units to recombine into larger ones once more. This takes place slowly and this temperature must be held for a time. Then as the temperature is raised real thermal decomposition takes place. The surfaces of the molecules are attacked and portions torn off, appearing as tar and gas.

By manipulating the process so that the molecules have large surfaces, which means the molecules are small in size, more tar is produced at the expense of coke. Or if tar is not desired, the high temperatures can be used when the molecules are large.

There is hope that the new knowledge of coking will allow the making of coke from coals which are not at present considered "coking coals."

One-sixth of all the coal produced in the United States is coked and the new methods promised by the Carnegie Institute's researches are for that reason of great economic importance. From coal, in addition to coke and gas, come ammonia and a vast array of drugs, perfumes, chemicals and dyes made from the coal tar.

All Elements Are Found in Every Part of Earth

Berlin.—Gold in "them thar hills?" Certainly. There is gold in every hill, in the dirt under your feet—in fact, gold in every mineral particle on earth.

Not only gold, but radium, platinum, common iron and lead, and every one of the whole list of 92 elements known to chemistry. There may be so little that they can't be measured by even the most delicate of commonly used chemical methods of analysis, but they are all present just the same.

This doctrine of the "omnipresence of all elements" is put forth by Drs. Walter and Ida Noddack, German chemists famous for their discovery of the two exceedingly rare elements, rhenium and masurium. The Noddacks are masters of some of the most sensitive methods of analysis ever devised, so that they are entitled to speak with authority.

Mixed in Fluid Form.

This complete mixing of all the earth's ingredients, they hold, took place back near the beginning of geologic history, when the earth was still in fluid form, and "boiling" actively.

The practical significance of the idea of elemental omnipresence is, that chemists should always state to how many decimal places they have carried any given analysis. They are not entitled to say of any element, "not present," or "concentration zero," but only, "not found in the concentration examined."

This point of view, the Noddacks believe, has real significance for chemical analysis as used in industry, medicine, and many other daily-life applications.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

NO ONE BELIEVES PETER RABBIT

IT IS hard not to be believed. Ask Peter Rabbit. He knows. Yes, indeed, he knows. It is bad enough not to be believed when one is not telling the truth, but to tell the truth and then have everybody tell you that they don't believe you is worse still. Anyway, Peter Rabbit thinks so. To make it worse, it was great news that Peter had to tell, and, of course, he might just as well have had no news at all.

It all came from Peter's curiosity to see the deepest part of the Green

"They Were as Big as the Tracks of Farmer Brown's Boy," Said Peter, His Big Eyes Round With Excitement.

Forest when everything was covered with snow. Of course, he had to satisfy that curiosity. It wouldn't have been like Peter not to have done so. So off he went all by himself way into the deepest part of the Green Forest, close to the foot of the Great Mountain, and there he found it so still that he could feel the stillness. Anyway, that's what he said. And it was so lonesome there that Peter would have been afraid of his own shadow had he seen it. He had made up his mind that no one ever visited that part of the Green Forest, at least not in the winter time, when suddenly he saw tracks. And such tracks! It was those tracks that had made Peter all his present trouble. You see, no one would believe Peter when he told about those tracks.

The first one Peter saw after getting back to the dear Old Briar Patch was Sammy Jay, and though Peter doesn't like Sammy, he just had to tell him about those strange tracks.

"They were as big as the tracks of Farmer Brown's boy," said Peter, his big eyes round with excitement.

"Probably he made them," said Sammy Jay shortly.

"But they were not his tracks, only something like his—the ones he makes in the mud around the Swimming Pool when he goes swimming in the summer, and you know as well as I do that he never makes that kind of tracks in the winter, Sammy Jay," cried Peter.

Sammy looked sharply at Peter and began to laugh.

"Besides," Peter hurried on, "whoever made those tracks had claws, great, great big claws!"

Sammy laughed harder than ever and in the most provoking way. "Do you expect me to believe any such story as that, Peter Rabbit?" he demanded. "You better not talk to me about not telling the truth when you tell such a story as that," and off flew Sammy, still laughing to think that Peter should try to make him believe such a foolish story.

Peter looked after him and scratched his head thoughtfully. "Those tracks did look something like those of Farmer Brown's boy," he muttered. "They were rounder, but they were big and they had toes and—well, perhaps they didn't look very much like them, but they did look something like them, and I said 'something.' I believe I'll go tell Chatterer the Red Squirrel about them."

But Chatterer laughed at Peter just as Sammy Jay had. "You've had a bad dream, Peter. That's what's the matter with you. Who ever heard of any one in the Green Forest who made tracks like those. Why, Bowser the Hound makes the biggest tracks with claw marks, as you ought to know by this time. You've had a dream, Peter, and now you better run away and forget it."

It was the same way with Tommy Tit the Chickadee and Mrs. Grouse and Billy Mink, and every one else he told the story to. Every one laughed at him and no one believed him. Poor Peter grew quite miserable, for he knew what his eyes had seen, and it was dreadfully hard to be laughed at and have fun poked at him just because he insisted that he had seen those strange tracks.

First Aid to the Ailing House

—By— Roger B. Whitman

FOR ECONOMY—COAL OR OIL?

A QUESTION that continually comes up is on the relative economy of heating a house by coal or by oil. There can be no general answer, because of the many conditions that enter in. For one thing, a coal fire run by hand may not be efficient; much good coal may go out with the ashes. It is unusual to find a household heating plant, stoked by hand, in which as much as 60 per cent of the heat in coal is actually utilized. An oil burner, on the other hand, when properly installed and adjusted, runs with much higher efficiency, and for this reason a comparison of operating costs might be unfair.

With a coal stoker, a more accurate comparison can be made, because of the higher efficiency that is possible with a machine over hand methods.

The running conditions of an oil burner are quite different from those of a coal fire. A coal fire continually delivers heat, and with no extreme difference in temperature between smoldering and burning with full draft. An oil burner, on the other hand, is either delivering no heat at all, or producing a temperature far higher than a coal fire running at full blast.

In a boiler designed for coal, the movement of hot air and gases through its inside passages is comparatively slow; there is ample time for heat to be absorbed by the metal. With an oil burner attached to the same boiler, the heated gases pass through at much higher speed; a speed that may not allow sufficient time for the metal to pick up a large proportion of the heat. Much of the heat is wasted up the chimney. Some boilers designed for coal have long passages, and are well suited to oil. This is the case with so-called "square" boilers that are made up of vertical sections. In "round" boilers the inside passages are shorter and more direct. They give good efficiency with coal, but are not well adapted to oil—moving at high speed, the heated gases are in contact with the boiler surfaces for too brief a time for maximum heat to pass to the metal.

Boilers with built-in oil burners run with high efficiency—that is, less of the heat is wasted up the chimney—than is the case when an oil burner is adapted to a boiler designed for coal. Boiler and burner being designed for each other, a high percentage of heat is utilized in heating the house.

Economy in burning oil thus depends on the conditions. With a boiler designed for the quick absorption of heat, the cost of oil may be low; but whether or not it is less than the cost of operating the same boiler with coal will depend on the efficiency with which the coal is burned.

THE SPIRIT

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE thing we fear may come to pass,
Perhaps because we fear it,
Or else this world is leaves and grass,
With nothing of the spirit.
The thing we fear, if feared too long,
Accumulates the faster,
If feared too long becomes too strong
For any man to master.

The thing we dream may yet come true,
Perhaps because we dream it,
Or else this world is world all through,
And not the world we deem it.
The thing we dream, if dreamed with faith,
With faith that will not waver,
If dreamed with faith is not a wraith,
But something surer, braver.

The thing we are decides our way,
Perhaps because we will it,
Or else this world is only clay,
A hole, and dirt to fill it.
The thing we are, the thing within,
Decides, not things without us;
The thing we are will make or mar,
And shape the world about us.

THE LANGUAGE OF YOUR HAND

By Leicester K. Davis

© Public Ledger, Inc.

THESE lessons in the language of your hand, remember, have been prepared to give you more than a mere smattering of palmistry. That is why the basic elements are being described one at a time and in detail. If you are to become really skilled in the analysis of hands, you should be thoroughly familiar with the fundamental characteristics and their variations, upon which the expert palmist relies for accurate results.

Among the primary elements, as these are called, none is more important than the second finger, or Finger of Saturn.

What the Finger of Saturn Reveals.

In making your preliminary survey of a hand, look to this finger as an index of the kind of conscious and subconscious thought which governs its possessor. The length, shape and inclination of the finger usually show how the mentality functions, and whether it is of careful reasoning or unreasoning variety, reflective or creative, scheming or melancholy, influenced for good or ill.

The ideal Finger of Saturn is straight and of pronounced length, not overfleshed or pudgy looking, with knuckles well but not over developed.

The tip is moderately rounded, with either a broad or somewhat pear-shaped nail, well set. Under pressure the entire finger should have a springy, resilient feel. With hand extended wide the finger should be fairly evenly spaced between the first and third fingers.

When such a finger of Saturn is discovered, you may safely place its owner as a clear-thinking individual of open mind, interested in worthwhile things calling for constructive and logical use of the mentality.

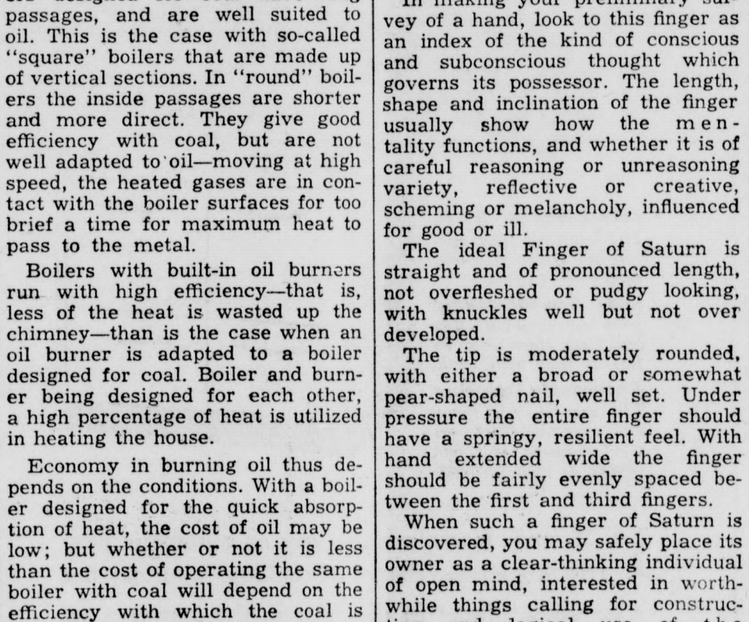
Model Church in a Model Village



Even the workmen on ladders around this model church at Bekonscot, England, are models. The church is an exact reproduction in miniature of the projected memorial church to G. K. Chesterton, famous novelist who died last year. It measures 7 feet, 6 inches by 5 feet, and is the latest addition to the model village, complete with country clubs, stores and other buildings, that was opened on Good Friday. The toy village is often visited by children of the English royal family.

"AUNT ALMA, there's just one thing I don't like about my new dress—it's so attractive I'm afraid Sis over there will appropriate it when I'm not looking. Outside of that I'm crazy about it, and I think you're swell to make it for me. Why—"

"What's this, what's this? If that isn't a laugh. Aunt Alma! Imagine me wanting anybody's dress. Why since you've taught me to sew-my-own I never want anything. I just make it and that's that. This sport dress, for instance, took me only one afternoon."

Praise From Auntie.

"I think you do wonderfully well with your sewing, my dear. You'll be making my clothes the first thing I know. I feel especially pleased with my new spring dress and I have both of you to thank for suggesting this style. It does right well by my hips, and it's so comfortable through the shoulders. I guess I should diet but in this dress I feel nice and slender. Don't you see, girls, how important it is to choose a style that's particularly becoming? It's abiding by this theory that gives some women such enviable chic."

Gas, Gas All the Time, Can't Eat or Sleep

"The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart seemed to hurt. A friend suggested Adlerika. The first dose I took brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never felt better." —Mrs. Jas. Filler.

Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adlerika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli."

Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and constipation. At all Leading Druggists.

MAKE OUR SCHOOLS SALE

The fake accident racketeer is one of the worst parasites with which society has to contend. He preys on the public purse by defrauding one of our greatest industries—the casualty insurance companies. Higher rates to the insurance buyer are the necessary and direct result of his activities. Consequently it is with genuine gratification that one reads of another of these parasites being overtaken by the law.

New York recently convicted the leader of a ring of lawyers, doctors and "stooges" who in eight years defrauded insurance companies of hundreds of thousands of dollars in fake accident claims. It took more than four months for this particular leader to confess to the district attorney the multitudinous ramifications of his nefarious activities. Before he was through he had involved four physicians, seventeen lawyers and four notaries. It was revealed that he had built up his "business" from fifty fake claim cases in 1929 to a peak production of 500 in 1935 and 1936.

He had an amazingly efficient organization. He himself scouted around spying out defective steps in front of buildings, broken vault lights in the sidewalks and other conditions affording an opportunity to file fake claims. As the district attorney said, "He believed in quantity production and quick settlement."

It is easy to visualize the insidious undermining effect which the fake claim racketeer has on the entire insurance industry, and on the insured public. It is imperative that these evil "enterprises" be ferreted out and destroyed. Long strides have been taken in this direction through co-operation between the insurance companies, represented by the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, and law enforcement bodies. Success is assured if the individual citizen will also co-operate to the best of his ability at every opportunity.

POINT SAN PEDRO ROCKAWAY BEACH

The school children in this locality had a royal good time at their May Day picnic at Vallemar Park, Friday, of last week. About 75 children attended the event, and parents and friends increased the number to 90. It was a basket picnic and there was music and dancing. This was one of the first of the summer entertainments.

Mrs. Hector Martin's father, Thomas Prudden, of San Francisco had a birthday party at his home on May Day. The big surprise of the birthday was the arrival of Mrs. Martin's uncle, John Prudden, of San Luis Obispo. John Prudden is a favorite uncle, it seems, with all his nieces and nephews and his surprise visit was hailed with delight. Twenty-two guests sat down to the birthday dinner. The following day, Uncle John was entertained with a special party at the Hector Martins where fifteen assembled to meet him.

Qualifying Rounds For Golf Team

Qualifying rounds for the Jefferson golf team were held, Monday and Thursday afternoons of last week, at Ingleside Public Golf Course.

The four men who turned in the lowest scores and who made the team are Charles Wise, Santana Mesa, Ben Petrini and Bob McCune. They finished in the order they are listed. However, competitors who did not place are entitled to again challenge the leaders in an attempt to make the team.

Interclass golf will be played next week at Ingleside with a four man team representing each class. Interschool competition will start in a week or two.

Guest Speakers

David Gaggero, president of the student body of Jefferson Union High School, spoke before members of the Exchange Club of San Bruno, Thursday evening of last week, as the club observed Public Schools Week. He chose as his topic "What High School Has Meant to Me."

Dale Hilts, president of the senior class and former student body president, also was a student speaker at the same dinner meeting, which was held at Uncle Tom's Cabin. Hilts used as his topic "What Modern Education Attempts to Do."

Henry Hall, superintendent of the San Bruno schools, and Clive Saiz of Jefferson High were joint chairmen for the evening.

Dist. Board Members of PTA Meet Monday

Executive board members of the Seventeenth District California Congress of Parents and Teachers will meet, Monday of next week, at 1:30 p. m., in the board room of the Burlingame Public Library.

Final plans will be discussed for the monster card party to be held by the district at Masonic Temple, 145 Park road, Burlingame, Friday, May 21. Dessert will be served at 1:30 and the card games will start immediately following dessert—continuing as long as each table may desire. There will be a prize for each table.

P. T. A. members throughout San Mateo County are invited to the affair. This is the only money-raising affair conducted by the district. Funds so raised will be used for student aid work.

Beautiful Sunday Brings Cove Crowd

Warm spring sunshine and the best cod fishing in weeks contributed to a full and jocund interval last week end at Shelter Cove.

The San Francisco water front was well represented at the cove by a delegation of tow boat men. This jovial crowd staged a surprise party for Elmer Hess, one of the visitors, in "ship shape and bristol fashion." After the surprise party all hands went up to the Lewis Ship Cafe for refreshments. The tow boat crowd state that they like Shelter Cove and the Lewises so much, they've decided to stay at the cove for a year.

Guests at the surprise party were Elmer Hess, the guest of honor; Captain Nels Jessen, Frank McGrath, Miss Carey, Miss Jewel Jacques, Mrs. Ruth McGrath, all of the San Francisco water front; and the famed hosts of Shelter Cove, Mr. and Mrs. George Lewis.

FIESTA STREET

Market street will surrender its proud position as the parade ground of San Francisco during the Golden Gate Bridge Fiesta, May 27 to June 2. Instead the troops, the floats and the revelers will stage their spectacular procession from the north end of Van Ness avenue along the Marina to the Presidio.

But Market street will be no less gay for that, with its banners and lights and redwood greenery. All through the downtown area will run a spirit of fiesta and merchants will stage fashion shows the like of which have never been seen in the metropolis.

TEACHERS ARE HELPED BY NEW SECURITY BILL

Probationary Period Is Extended Another Two Years By Law

it, and who have served a one, two or three year probationary period.

The Sawallisch bill, passed as an emergency measure, will prevent a wholesale shifting around of personnel as all teacher assignments for the coming year must be made by May 15.

"The net result of this law, from the layman's standpoint," said Roy W. Cloud, secretary of the California Teachers Association, "is to give trustees in unified districts a better opportunity to study their teachers and to select only the best for tenure.

"Instead of being compelled to make arbitrary decisions by May 15, which might have resulted in grave injustice where trustees have not had an opportunity as yet to become fully acquainted with the worth of teachers under the unification plan, the probationary period is extended for an additional two years.

"Trustees have the optional right under the law now, however, of granting tenure to all teachers considered worthy who have completed the past year of service."

BAYSHORE WILL SPONSOR GATE BRIDGE FIESTA

Board Of Councilmen Vote $200 To Defray First Program Expenses

cepted by the council. This lease will entitle the council to the use of the mezzanine floor and assembly hall, heat, light and water needed for the next three years, at $40 per month. Rent in the past was $25 per month.

A request for a permit, submitted by Ed Schwerin, to construct stands and sell fireworks along the Bayshore Highway at Bayshore City was granted. Sales will begin June 20 and terminate July 6.

Under unfinished business the storm water condition caused by the new livestock pavilion was discussed. As yet no definite solution to the alleged nuisance has been reached. Mayor Lawson recommended further research and work on the problem.

The council adopted, as an emergency measure, Ordinance No. 24 in regard to trailer camps and auto courts. In connection with this matter the petition of Mr. and Mrs. William Hoffsmith to construct an auto court in Bayshore was layed over to an adjourned meeting of the council. Prior to this final consideration a hearing of property owners within 500 feet of the proposed structure will be held.

Also held over until the adjourned meeting, May 18, is the decision on the municipal water system. City Engineer Klassen is preparing a study of comparative costs of this project as against the existing system.

Gala Celebration Planned For Fiesta

"Bayshore City, the gateway to San Mateo County; no bonded indebtedness, municipally tax free, the home of the largest livestock exposition pavilion in California to be opened in 1939, welcomes you to its celebration at the opening of the Golden Gate Bridge and invites you to its portals in 1939."

This is the slogan adopted by local citizens in their plan for appropriate fiesta activities. Wednesday evening of this week, interested citizens met at the city hall to outline the celebration.

A. Taylor was appointed chairman of chairmen, Mayor Lawson, honorary chairman; Irene Mardecich, secretary, and Emma Shaw, treasurer.

Street decorations, costumes, dancing, bon fires, programs, fire works and other activities will feature the festivities. Brisbane residents and all neighboring communities are invited to participate in the celebration.

Tomorrow evening, Sunday, the committees will meet at the city hall to arrange program details.

WPA Develops New Navigation School

Mariners, yachtsmen and aviators can now learn navigation by an easy and practical method through a course developed by the Works Progress Administration Education Program of the State Department of Education. Two classes in which this simple system of preparing a seafarer for duties as a deck officer, a yachtsman to navigate his craft on ocean waters or an aviator to pilot his ship across country are being established by the program.

The classes which are free to the public, will meet each Tuesday, Thursday and Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock, 1421 Sutter street, where enrollment can now be made on these evenings. Ernest Bosch, widely known as a mathematician and instructor of sciences will conduct the class.

Through an artificial horizon, sextant and observations of the stars, planets and moon navigation will actually be practiced in the classroom studies. Calculations will be worked up by the most approved and simple methods which do not require an extensive knowledge of mathematics.

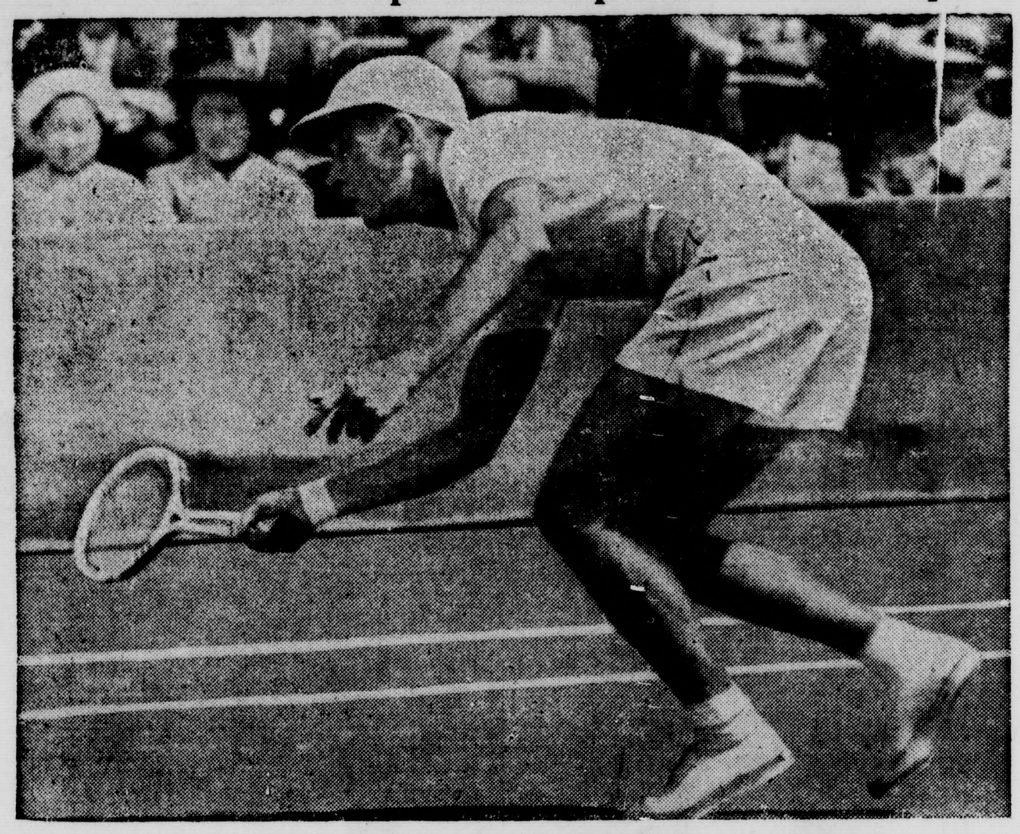
U. S. Net Team Sweeps Davis Cup Matches With Japan



Losing only one set in five matches, the United States tennis team recently scored a smashing triumph in the Davis Cup zone elimination series with Japan. Pictured above is Frankie Parker, executing one of the forehand "cut shots" which brought him a 6-0, 6-3, 6-2 victory over Fumiteru Nakano. Following the Parker-Nakano tilt, Don Budge, great Oakland, Cal., star, cannon-balled his way to triumph over Jiro Yamagishi, captain of the series. A capacity crowd watched the matches, which were played over a three day period on the Olympic Club's "grass-tex" courts at Lakeside, San Francisco.

Junior College Glee Clubs To Stockton

The men's and women's glee clubs of the San Mateo Junior College will go to the College of the Pacific in Stockton Monday, May 10, to attend the annual junior college music festival. Uniformed groups from many of the junior colleges of Northern California will sing as separate units and then attend a concert given by Pacific. From its two groups San Mateo will also assemble an a-cappella choir which will have a part in the junior college program.

Thirty eight students will make the trip from San Mateo.

Telegraph Worker Mountain Climber

Probably nobody but Arthur M. Marshall, of Vancouver, Wash., has stood on the highest point in each of the 48 states of the Union. Probably nobody but Mr. Marshall ever even thought of doing it. But Mr. Marshall, you see, is a real mountain climber. He can't just look at a peak; he has to climb it. He has made 388 ascents, including eight Colorado peaks each more than 14,000 feet in height. He says the hardest peak he knows of to climb is Granite Peak, in the Beartooth mountains of Montana—because of its inaccessibility.

Hunting out and climbing to the highest point in each of the states led him into some strange places. In Illinois, his goal proved to be a hill behind a farmer's barn; in Delaware it was somebody's back yard; in Ohio it was a corn field. When he's not conquering mountains, Mr. Marshall is a railroad telegraph operator.

Minimum Height For Marines Reduced

The minimum height standard for enlistment in the United States Marine Corps has been lowered to 64 inches, according to information just received by the postmaster of Daly City.

Previously the minimum height standard was 66 inches, and this change has been made in order to give more young men the opportunity to participate in athletics, travel, education and adventure and to serve their country with the United States Marines.

Application blanks and literature may be obtained by writing to or calling at the Marine Corps Recruiting Station, Room 46, Federal Building, San Francisco.

THOMAS AT FIESTA

John Charles Thomas, celebrated baritone, will sing to his greatest visible audience when he takes the lead in the pageant that is a feature of the Golden Gate Bridge Fiesta, May 27 to June 2.

The pageant will be staged in Crissy Field and seating accommodations have been prepared for 25,000.

Young At 46

Still carrying children to school at Pararata Valley in New Zealand is a hardy little Shetland pony of 46.

That is old for a pony, yet Dot is in fine condition, has a good set of teeth. This pony was bought in 1899, being then guaranteed to be no more than nine years old.

In her time Dot has carried five generations of children to school and has won five or six prizes in the show rings.

Still full of tricks, she insists on "shaking hands" with one of her front legs before allowing anyone to put the bridle on.

BONVITAS PICNIC

The Bonvitas Club will hold an indoor picnic at their hall, 111 Raymond avenue, Saturday of next week. There will be a door prize, dancing and games.

COMMUNICATION

When California was admitted as a state into the Union, September 9, 1850, the news was not received in San Francisco until October 18 following. No railroads, no automobiles, nor airships; no telegraph, no telephone, no radio.

Completion of Golden Gate Bridge is another milestone in the progress of communication, a new miracle in engineering achievement. Tribute to this march of progress will be given May 27 to June 2, when San Francisco invites the world to come to the Golden Gate Bridge Fiesta.

The Garden Murder Case

—17—

"For God's sake," Garden burst out, "it's up to you to find out the truth. I'm on the spot—what with my going out of the room with Woody yesterday, my failure to place his bet, then the mater's accusation, and that damned will of hers, and the medicine. You've got to find out who's guilty . . ."

As he was talking the door bell had rung, and Heath came up the hallway.

Vance went to Garden and, putting a hand on the man's shoulder, urged him back into his chair. "Come, buck up," he said; "we'll need your help, and if you work up a case of jitters you'll be useless."

"But don't you see how deeply involved I am?" Garden protested weakly.

"You're not the only one involved," Vance returned calmly. He turned to Siefert. "I think, doctor, we should have a little chat. Possibly we can get the matter of your patient's death straightened out a bit. Suppose we go upstairs to the study, what?"

In the study Vance went directly to the point.

"Doctor, the time has come when we must be perfectly frank with each other. The usual conventional considerations of your profession must be temporarily put aside. I shall be altogether candid with you and trust that you can see your way to being equally candid with me."

Siefert, who had taken a chair near the door, looked at Vance a trifle uneasily.

"I regret that I do not understand what you mean," he said in his suavest manner.

"I merely mean," replied Vance coolly, "that I am fully aware that it was you who sent me the anonymous telephone message Friday night."

Siefert raised his eyebrows slightly.

"Assuming, for the sake of argument," he said with deliberation, "that it was I who phoned you Friday night, what then?"

Vance watched the man with a faint smile.

"It might be, don't y' know," he said, "that you were cognizant of the situation here, and that you had a suspicion—or let us say, a fear—that something tragic was impending." Vance took out his cigar case and lighted a cigarette. "I fully understood the import of that message, doctor—as you intended. That is why I happened to be here yesterday afternoon. The significance of your reference to the Aeneid and the inclusion of the word 'equanimity' did not escape me. I must say, however, that your advice to investigate radio-active sodium was not entirely clear—although I think I now have a fairly lucid idea as to the implication. However, there were some deeper implications in your message, and this is the time, d' ye see, when we should face this thing together with complete honesty."

Siefert brought his eyes back to Vance in a long appraising glance, and then shifted them to the window again.

"Yes, I did send you that message. I realize that nothing can be gained now by not being frank with you . . . The situation in this household has bothered me for a long time, and lately I've had a sense of imminent disaster."

"How long have you felt this premonition?" asked Vance.

"For the past three months, I should say. Although I have acted as the Gardens' physician for many years, it was not until last fall that Mrs. Garden's changing condition came to my notice. I thought little of it at first, but, as it grew worse and I found myself unable to diagnose it satisfactorily, a curious suspicion forced itself on me that the change was not entirely natural. I began coming here much more frequently than had been my custom, and during the last couple of months I had felt many subtle undercurrents in the various relationships of the household, which I had never sensed before. Of course, I knew that Floyd and Swift never got along particularly well — that there was some deep animosity and jealousy between them. I also knew the terms of Mrs. Garden's will."

Siefert paused with a frown.

"As I say, it has been only recently that I have felt something deeper and more significant in all this interplay of temperaments; and this feeling grew to such proportions that I actually feared a violent climax of some kind—especially as Floyd told me only a few days ago that his cousin intended to stake his entire remaining funds on Equanimity in the big race yesterday. So overpowering was my feeling in regard to the whole situation here that I decided to do something about it, if I could manage it without divulging any professional confidences. But you saw through my subterfuge."

Vance nodded. "I appreciate your scruples in the matter, doctor. I only regret that I was unable to forestall these tragedies. That, as it happened, was beyond human power." Vance looked up quickly. "By the by, doctor, did you have any definite suspicions when you phoned me Friday night?"

Siefert shook his head with emphasis. "No. Frankly, I was baffled. I merely felt that some sort of explosion was imminent."

Vance smoked a while in silence. "And now, doctor, will you be so good as to give us the full details about this morning?"

Siefert drew himself up in his chair.

"There's practically nothing to add to the information I gave you over the phone. Miss Beeton called me a little after eight o'clock and informed me that Mrs. Garden had died some time during the night. She asked for instructions, and I told her that I would come at once. I was here half an hour or so later. I could find no determinable cause for Mrs. Garden's death, and assumed it might have been her heart until Miss Beeton called my attention to the fact that the bottle of medicine sent by the druggist was empty . . ."

"By the by, doctor, what was the prescription you made out for your patient last night?"

"A simple barbital solution."

"And I believe you told me on the telephone that there was sufficient barbital in the prescription to have caused death."

"Yes." Doctor Siefert nodded. "If taken at one time."

"And Mrs. Garden's death was consistent with barbital poisoning?"

"There was nothing to contradict such a conclusion," Siefert answered. "And there was nothing to indicate any other cause."

"I Saw That She Was Dead."

"When did the nurse discover the empty bottle?"

"Not until after she had phoned me, I believe."

Vance, smoking lazily, was watching Siefert from under speculative eyelids.

"Tell me something of Mrs. Garden's illness, doctor, and why radio-active sodium should have suggested itself to you."

Siefert brought his eyes sharply back to Vance.

"I was afraid you would ask that. But this is no time for squeamishness. I must trust wholly to your discretion. As I've already said, I don't know the exact nature of Mrs. Garden's ailment. The symptoms have been very much like those accompanying radium poisoning. But I have never prescribed any of the radium preparations for her—I am, in fact, profoundly skeptical of their efficacy."

He cleared his throat before continuing.

"One evening while reading the reports of the researches made in California on radioactive sodium, or what might be called artificial radium, which has been heralded as a possible medium of cure for cancer, I suddenly realized that Professor Garden himself was actively interested in this particular line of research and had done some very creditable work in the field. The realization was purely a matter of association, and I gave it little thought at first. But the idea persisted, and before long some very unpleasant possibilities began to force themselves upon me."

Again the doctor paused, a troubled look on his face.

"About two months ago I suggested to Doctor Garden that, if it were at all feasible, he put Miss Beeton on his wife's case. I had already come to the conclusion that Mrs. Garden required more constant attention and supervision than I could afford her, and Miss Beeton, who is a registered nurse, had, for the past year or so, been working with Doctor Garden in his laboratory—in fact, it was I who had sent her to him when he mentioned his need of a laboratory assistant. I was particularly anxious to have her take Mrs. Garden's case, rather than some other nurse, for I felt that from her observations some helpful suggestions might result."

"And have Miss Beeton's subsequent observations been helpful to you, doctor?" asked Vance.

"No, I can't say that they have," Siefert admitted, "despite the fact that Doctor Garden still availed himself of her services occasionally in the laboratory, thereby giving her an added opportunity of keeping an eye on the entire situation."

Vance was studying the tip of his cigarette. Presently he asked: "Has the nurse's presence in the house resulted in any information regarding the general situation here?"

"Nothing that I had not already known. In fact, her observations have merely substantiated my own conclusions. It's quite possible, too, that she herself may unwittingly have augmented the animosity between young Garden and Swift, for she has intimated to me once or twice a very strong suspicion that she is personally interested in Floyd Garden."

Vance looked up with augmented interest.

"What, specifically, has given you that impression, doctor?"

"Nothing specific," Siefert told him. "I have, however, observed them together on several occasions, and my impression was that some sentiment existed there. Nothing that I can put my finger on, though. But one night when I was walking up Riverside drive I happened to see them together in the park—undoubtedly a stroll together."

The nurse appeared at the door at that moment to announce the arrival of the medical examiner, and Vance asked her to bring Doctor Doremus up to the study.

"I might suggest," said Siefert quickly, "that, with your consent, it would be possible to have the medical examiner accept my verdict of death due to an accidental overdose of barbital and avoid the additional unpleasantness of an autopsy."

"Oh, quite." Vance nodded. "That was my intention." He turned to the district attorney. "All things considered, Markham," he said "I think that might be best."

Markham nodded in reluctant acquiescence as Doremus was led into the room by Miss Beeton. After a brief interchange of explanations and comments Doremus readily agreed to Markham's suggestion.

Doctor Siefert rose and looked hesitantly at Vance. "You will not need me further, I trust."

"Not at the moment, doctor." Vance rose also and bowed formally. "We may, however, communicate with you later . . . And, Miss Beeton, please sit down."

The girl came forward and seated herself in the nearest chair, as the men went down the passageway.

"I don't mean to trouble you unduly, Miss Beeton," said Vance; "but we should like to have a first-hand account of the circumstances surrounding the death of Mrs. Garden."

"I wish there was something definite I could tell you," the nurse replied readily in a business-like manner, "but all I know is that when I arose this morning, a little after seven, Mrs. Garden seemed to be sleeping quietly. After dressing I went to the dining-room and had my breakfast; and then I took a tray in to Mrs. Garden. She always had tea and toast at eight o'clock. It wasn't until I had drawn up the shades and closed the windows, that I realized something was wrong. I spoke to her and she didn't answer me; and when I tried to rouse her I got no response. I saw then that she was dead. I called Doctor Siefert at once, and he came over as quickly as he could."

"You sleep, I believe, in Mrs. Garden's room?"

The nurse inclined her head. "Yes. You see, Mrs. Garden frequently needed some small service in the night."

"Had she required your attention at any time during the night?"

"No. The injection Doctor Siefert gave her before he left her seemed to have quieted her and she was sleeping peacefully when I went out—"

"You went out last night? . . . What time did you leave the house?" asked Vance.

"About nine o'clock. Mr. Floyd Garden suggested it, assuring me that he would be here and that he thought I needed a little rest."

"Had you no professional qualms about leaving a sick patient at such a time?"

"Ordinarily I might have had," the girl returned resentfully; "but Mrs. Garden had never shown me any consideration. She was the most selfish person I ever knew. Anyway, I explained to Mr. Floyd Garden about giving his mother a teaspoonful of the medicine if she should wake up and show any signs of restlessness. And then I went out into the park."

"At what time did you return, Miss Beeton?"

"It must have been about eleven," she told him.

"Mrs. Garden was asleep when you came in?"

The girl turned her eyes to Vance before answering.

"I—I thought—she was asleep," she said hesitantly. "Her color was all right. But perhaps—even then—"

"Yes, yes. I know," Vance put in quickly. "By the by, did you notice anything changed—anything, let us say, out of place—in the room, on your return?"

The nurse shook her head slowly. "No. Everything seemed the same to me. The windows and shades were just as I had left them, and—Wait, there was something. The glass I had left on the night-table with drinking water was empty. I refilled it before going to bed."

Vance looked up quickly. "And the bottle of medicine?"

"I didn't particularly notice that; but it must have been just as I had left it, for I remember a fleeting sense of relief because Mrs. Garden hadn't needed a dose of medicine."

Rules of Poetry—and Childhood

By JOSEPHINE E. PHILLIPS

"YOUR children always seem so happy, Mrs. Elliot. Don't they ever get cross?"

"Of course!" was the laughing reply. "They have their ups and downs. They wouldn't be normal if they didn't.

"But I sometimes wonder if the Elliots are merely normal," another mother broke in eagerly. 'There's such a joyousness about them. Haven't you a secret about their bringing-up?"

Child's Life as a Poem.

"Well, y-yes." Mrs. Elliot smiled almost shyly. "I didn't suppose I should ever tell it, but if it would help anyone, perhaps I ought. You see, I try to think of the daily life of each of my children as a little poem.'

"A poem!" gasped one of the listeners. "I surely couldn't compare either of my children's helter-skelter lives to anything as high-brow as a poem—"

"But poetry isn't high-brow," Mrs. Elliot reminded her. "Poetry is for everybody."

"Still, I don't see—" puzzled Mrs. Edwards. "How can you make a poem—"

Subject Matter and Form.

"I don't, really. I only think of it that way. There are two kinds of beauty in poetry; beauty of subject matter and beauty of form. I guess we all try to give our youngsters beauty of 'subject matter' in their lives, try to keep them always in the presence of the best so that happy things, rather than vicious, will come to them. And we help them to find the high lights. Even a long narrative poem has its lyric moments of breath-taking beauty, or suspense, or climax! I don't like a day to go by in which Billy and Margaret and Jack do not discover somewhere some lovely moment—and appreciate it.

"And then there is the beauty of 'form' in their daily lives. In poetry we know there are well-fixed laws about the regular recurrence of stresses and verse-patterns. I somehow compare these laws to those which must govern from the moment a tiny fuzzy-haired baby is first placed in one's arms—laws of health, regularity of all habits. But soon one can put variation into the steady rhythm of a baby's day, the variation of a wee bit of cuddling and play.

Order and Freedom.

"Isn't that like poetry, where so much of the beauty comes from a careful balance between the established pattern and the variations from that pattern? There are certain rules of health and conduct which are inviolable, of course, but once understanding these, unless we allow some flexibility and some freedom for the development of individuality, our little folks might as well be brought up 'machine-made' in an old-time orphan asylum. I try, in discipline and in all my dealings with the children, to maintain that flexibility. Perhaps that is why they keep their joyousness. Order and freedom; that is the paradox of the well-managed kindergarten. It is also the paradox of happy family life. And no one will deny that it is and always has been the paradox of poetry!"

"High lights — habit — order—freedom," mused Mrs. Edwards thoughtfully, gathering up her bundles. "I'd better be getting home to my own little family of free verses now. And it might be a very good idea to try to get some regulated rhythm into their background—and help them find some high lights!"—National Kindergarten association.

Real Reverence

THIS is the thing which I know and which, if you labor faithfully you shall know also; that in reverence is the chief joy and power in life. Reverence, for what is pure and bright in your own youth; for what is true and tried in the age of others; for all that is gracious among the living, great among the dead, and marvelous in the Powers that cannot die.—Ruskin.

Train trees when they are saplings and men and women when they are children.

He Remains "Dead"—"Strangled" by Red Tape

John Kachnycz, of Pittsburgh, Pa., officially recorded as murdered seven years ago, and therefore legally dead, is now at work on a farm. But in the eyes of the law he just doesn't exist.

In 1929, Kachnycz left home to work in the country, and later was identified by a friend, as a man killed in a street fight. His relatives even collected the insurance money on his life—and a man was tried for the murder but acquitted.

Now, after trying to come back to life in the legal sense, but finding the technicalities too great, he has given it up and remains dead in the eyes of the law.

FIRESTONE TIRES AND AUTO SUPPLIES SAVE MONEY IN EVERY FARM OPERATION

EVEN though the prices of farm crops are advancing, the best way you can make more money is to SAVE IT in production costs.

YOU SAVE 25% in fuel costs and 25% in time by putting Ground Grip Tires on your tractor and all wheeled farm implements. They ride and pull easier and reduce repair bills.

YOU SAVE because one set of Firestone Tires will fit several implements. Your Implement Dealer or Firestone Tire Dealer has a plan whereby he will cut down the wheels on your present implements to a uniform diameter and weld a flat, steel rim to the end of the spokes. And by the use of Firestone Demountable Rims the tires and rims can be taken off one machine when not in use and applied to another.

YOU SAVE because Firestone Ground Grip Tires are built with EXTRA construction features. These outstanding advantages are patented and used only in Firestone Tires. Gum-Dipping saturates and coats every cord with pure liquid rubber. This process counteracts internal friction and heat and makes the tire much stronger to resist the strains of the extra pull. The two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread bind the tread and body together into one inseparable unit of tremendous strength. The scientific arrangement in spacing of the deep, rugged bars of the self-cleaning tread gives greater traction and drawbar pull.

YOU SAVE by buying NOW as tire prices are sure to advance. The price of crude rubber has advanced 110% and cotton more than 26% during the past two years. Tire prices are bound to go higher. Buy Firestone Ground Grip Tires NOW for your cars, trucks, tractors and all wheeled farm implements and make money by reducing your cost of production. See your Implement Dealer, Firestone Tire Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store TODAY.

The Farmer's Choice FOR RURAL HIGHWAYS

IT REALLY doesn't pay to drive on tires after the "non-skid" is worn off — in fact, the last 1,000 miles of wear in a tire are only worth about 38c. Why take the risk of a dangerous skid or perhaps fatal blowout when new Firestone Standard Tires cost so little?

More and more farmers are buying Firestone Standard Tires because they get the benefits of Gum-Dipping, the Firestone patented process that counteracts internal friction and heat which ordinarily destroy tire life. They get longer non-skid mileage and unusually low cost per mile with dependable SAFETY.

It is almost unbelievable that so much tire could be bought for so little. Firestone developed this tire primarily for rural highway use and a tire of first grade quality could only be made to sell at these low prices by building them in tremendous quantities. That's why you SAVE in first cost and in cost per mile. You also SAVE yourself from accidents because they give greater protection against dangerous skidding and blowouts.

Farmers everywhere are making Firestone Dealers and Firestone Auto Supply and Service Stores their headquarters for all automotive supplies. You get greater values in everything you buy and you get all your needs in one place—including tires — tubes — batteries — spark plugs — brake lining — fan belts — car radios — home radios — garden hose and garden tools — seat covers —light bulbs, and more than 2,000 other useful articles. You can be sure when you buy Firestone products you are getting the greatest value for your money. If you have not received the new 1937 Firestone Auto Supply Catalog, write for it today — address Firestone, Akron, Ohio, or Los Angeles, California.

Legion;" a play about Jesuits, removed doubt from the minds of many. The theater was discovered as not being a wicked place at all. Many church people became regular patrons.

Next in line were the followers of the famous old San Francisco Orpheum crowd, the group who used to reserve the same seats by the season for every change of bill. They took hold with Max Dill's first directed vaudeville last year at the Columbia. Since then they have been seen more frequently at Project plays.

In the interim the average theater goer patronage was increasing at all plays. There was a dearth of the so-called limousine trade however. Even the patronage that drives up in taxis was scarce for a long time. But that was last year. Such is not the case for "Swing Parade" and the Alcazar Theater.

The Alcazar plus "Swing Parade" and possibly the popularity of Max Dill as a director of musical comedy has excited the interest of the dwellers of Nob Hill, Pacific Heights, Sea Cliff, Piedmont, Hillsborough, Burlingame and other districts in which the well known Bay District conservative society element dwells. Friday and Saturday nights at the Alcazar are taking on the tone of a night at the opera, what with the white ties and tails of the men and the fur and furbelows of the women, the swank long bodied machines that whizz up to the curb and discharge their cargoes and the general air of a festive occasion that prevails on all sides. And do they seem to enjoy the show, and how! More than one group has been observed attending a second performance.

If the Federal Theater Project was intended to be a people's theater it has evidently arrived at the point of recognition as such which it could not do without the consideration of all the people and all the various groups that go to make up society in general in any American community. San Francisco seems to be showing the rest of the country that it is still alive to its far flung civic homily of being "the city that knows how" for it is conceded as leading all American theater centers in compelling recognition for its government theater.

Mrs. Roosevelt May Attend The Fiesta

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, first lady of the land, hopes to be in San Francisco for the Golden Gate Bridge Fiesta from May 27 to June 2.

She expressed this desire after being taken recently on a personal inspection of the bridge.

Construction work prevented Mrs. Roosevelt and the others from crossing over the entire span. However, Mrs. Roosevelt, alighting from the machine, stood in the center of the bridge and, looking towards the Golden Gate, exclaimed: "It's one of the greatest sights I have ever seen."

She said she hoped to arrange her affairs so that she might attend the fiesta which will celebrate the opening of the bridge.

PTA Past President Thanks Co-workers

Mrs. Ethel Jonas, past president of the Brisbane P. T. A., recently extended her personal gratitude to unit members for their co-operation during the past year and thanked them for the lovely gift she received.

To support the new president, Mrs. Gertha McKinney, and to actively enter all progressive P. T. A. programs was the final request made by Mrs. Jonas as she retired from office.

The unit sent flowers to the late Arthur Annis who passed away May 2. Annis was an active P. T. A. member and a Santa Claus to the children of Brisbane.

Jefferson Victor In P. A. L. Game

Jefferson and South San Francisco High Schools met for the second time in P. A. L baseball competition, Friday of last week, on the South City diamond. The Indians were again victorious, this time by a score of 10 to 8. Jefferson is leading the league at the present time and with only four of the last year regular players on the team this is a remarkable feat.

The game was a thrilling one throughout, with several long hits featuring the play. Nicolopulos of South City hit a tremendous homer in the first inning, and Owens, local pitcher, connected for a triple in the seventh. Twenty-six hits were made, Jefferson collecting seventeen and the boilermakers garnering nine off the two Indian pitchers, Strassburger and Owens.
